THE GOLD AND MONEY MARKETS.

The Course of Government, State and Railroad Bonds-The Money Market Stronger.

WALL STREAT.
SUNDAY, April 8, 1877.
At intervals events come upon the Stock Exchange as sorrows are said to do-in battalions. There has been no lack of them during the past week, and they ous stocks almost is equal proportions. The imme-ate effect was to produce a considerable agitation in the waters of speculation, create a nauscating mel de mer in the holders of certain favorite funcies, and a return at the end of the week to the placifity of the opening. The most startling occurrence was the sharp and unexpected attack upon Panama Railroad and Panife Mail, which forced the former down frem 120 to 80, and the latter from 18 to 12%-this at the very oment that the directors in the former stock were aring a quarterly dividend of 3 per cent and showing that they had earned it, and that the President of company was congratulating stockholders upon the improved condition of their property. Of course so fierce a squall could only proceed from the "rude Boreas" of the market, whose winds are it winds and who blows nobody any good but himself. In this case it is doubtful whether he has much beneted by the tempest, after all, for the flurry was as short as it was sharp, and, in a wrecking point of view, little opportunity was given for the collection of jetsam and flotsam in the shape of floating shares. It is a matter of "street" notoriety that Jay Gould, his acquisition of the Union Pacific road, has been affected with a moral strubismus which has come other upon Panama. To harmonize this erratic vision it became necessary to harmonize the interests non that the Panama property come under the control of Gould. Hence the attack which startled Stock Exchange circles and resulted in the discomfiture of two prominent perators. Regarding the small number of Panama shares which changed hands the movement does not shares which changed hands the introduction appear to have been a success, Gould having apparently failed to scare stockholders into selling and to have reckened without his host, or, more properly, ithout the friends who so promptly came to the aid of the embarrassed operators. The attack upon Pacific Mail being simply a sham to help along the main operation it was significant of nothing, and the price quickly returned to nearly the point of departure, while Panama, under the nelp extended, recovered to par, although it failed to entirely retain the improve int. The entire market was demoralized by the unexpected dash upon the above securities, and was at bear party, however, who would rather see the sink away through marasmus than expire by sudden death, interfered, through the, means of extensive purchases, at the nick of time and rallied prices generally some 2 or 3 per cent. The restoration of confidence was greatly aided by the settlement of difficulties which had en harassing the coal carriers—the trunk railroads Without being able to hit upon a better plan the former have readopted the old combination in an emasculated form, the same being a restriction of production and an advance of fitty cents per ton upon coal at tide water. The railways have followed pretty nearly in the same footsteps, having retinkered the December contract and sworn quite as stoutly as they

A slight stiffness in money was observable during the panicky days, due to the shifting of loans, but on the cessation of excitement the rate returned to the stereotype one of 2 a 3 THE TOLVELORIONE OF THE WERE

The following table represents the opening, highest and lowest sales, regular way, of the principal stocks during the past week, together with the number of shares dealt in. It will be observed that the aggregate volume of business was larger than for many mouths:

THE MONEY MARKET.

There has been something of a hardening in the money market during the week, money on call loaning up as high as 6 per cent, the general rate being, how-sver, 3 a 4 per cent on call. The last prices showed a lling off, as the market closed yesterday with money loaning at 2 per cent on call. The foreign exchanges bave been higher and strong, the last quotations being 4.85% a 4.85% for bankers' sixty days' sterling and 4.8734 for demand. The bank statement showed a decrease in the surplus reserve of $408,575, which leaves the total amount now held by the banks in ex-cess of legal requirements, $9,203,500. The principal changes were an increase of $1,317,100 in specie and a decrease of $2.098,800 in legal tenders and of $1,492,500 in deposits. The loans are up $368,000 and the circulation $134,100.

THE GOLD MARKET.

Gold opened on Monday morning at 105 and closed last night at the same figure. In the interim the only fluctuation was a decline of & to 104%. The following table shows the gold fluctuations for the week:-

Opening, Highest, Lowest, Closing 10436 10436 10436 10436 10436 105

The following were the latest quotations in gold for as follows:—General merchandise imports, including dry goods, $6,392,558; produce exports, $3,991,319, and specie exports, $93,000. The total imports of merchandise at the port since January 1, this year, were $90,788,536, against $94,422,449 for the correting period in 1876 and $106,876,291 in 1875; the social export of produce, $66,842,137, against $64,813,549 in 1876 and $63,601,149 in 1875; the total exports of specie were $3,535,432, agains; $14,473,745 in 1876 and $16,816,273 in 1875.

The steadiness in gold has been reflected in a similar firmness in government bonds. There was, however, but a moderate demand. In London our bonds are also steady, and the following were the closing

SCHWAB, THE COMMUNIST.

ARRESTED AT CHICKERING HALL FOR DIS-TURBING A MEETING-HIS DEFENCE AND DIS-CHARGE-THE DEN OF THE REDS.

Justus H. Schwab, the communist who was arrested for inciting riot in Tompkins square January 13, 1874, was brought before Judge Otterbourg at the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday on a charge of disor-derly conduct. Schwab is a tall, muscular German, about thirty-five years of age, with good, regular features and a very fair complexion. His hair is brushed straight up from his forehead, and looks as if it would defy any combing to keep it down. He has been known for years as one of the leaders of the communistic element in this city, and he went to Chickering Hall on Saturday evening, with a number of his followers, to express his opinion on the subject of municipal reform. Mr. Schwab was so vehement in his denunciation of the people present and the resolutions offered at the meeting and inter-rupted the proceedings so often, that Captain Copeland

When Schwab was arraigned yesterday he wanted to exptain his grevances to the Court, and commenced in a loud voice and with great gesticulation to recite the cause of his arrest, much to the amusement of the crowd in the court room.

"If went there," said Mr. Schwab, raising his right hand aloft, "in response to the call issued for citizens to meet and express their opinions, and when I heard resolutions offered that were opposed to the principles of universal suffrage I rebeiled. I will stand up at any time or in any place for universal suffrage. This meeting was supposed to represent the citizens of New York. It just represented what the handful of men on the platiorm wanted it to represent and nothing more. Where there is an affirmative there must be a negative, and because they would not hear my negative they put me out."

Mr. Leander Thompson and Emigrant Commissioner Starr appeared as wincesses in behalf of Schwab and testified that his conduct at the meeting was nothing more than an expression of opinion which was perfectly proper in a public meeting. Schwab was discharged and walked out followed by a crowd of admirers.

THE LION IN MIS DEN.

He remained all day at a saloon in First street, of which he is the owner, receiving the congratuations of his friends on his devotion to the cause of universal suffrage and workingmen's rights, Schwab's saloon is in a basement, and is the beadquarters of the Democratic Social Society, an organization that boats among its members any number of German philosophers of the most advanced school, all of whom wear red neckties and long hair and beard. Around the saloon are hung red banners bearing the following motions:

"The unconsumed products of the past should be an equal inheritance to the living generation."

"The unconsumed products of the past should be an equal inheritance to the living generation."

"The working people of the work unite."

"The law must be submitted to the people."

Besides these banners are a number of highly colored pictures descriptive of sce

GOTTLIEB SCHEERER'S FATE

The tamily and friends of Mr. Gottlieb Scheerer, the Newark confectioner, who was horribly mangled to leath on Saturday night, are loud in their denunciation of the report that he committed suicide or had preriously been drinking owing to domestic trouble. There was nothing in the world, they declare, to drive him to either drink or suicide. He had not tasted liquor of any kind since January last, they declare. Their version of how he met his shocking fate is this:-His father died in Germany recently, and his nicce, who resides in New York, was to have visited Nowark on Saturday night, bringing with her a letter she had received containing full particulars of the bereavement. Mr. Scheerer was at the depot waiting to meet her. The train arrived, but there was no sign of the young lady. While the cars were in motion Mr. Scheerer jumped on board to run through the cars is order to be certain the niece had not come. In his hurry and excitement he slipped, fell between the cars and was killed. This is the statement made by the family to County Physician Ward, who has declined to grant a burial certificate or order an inquest until he probes the facts in the case further. Mr. Scheerer was a man of considerable means, lived in Newark eighteen years, was highly respected, and is believed to have lived very happily with his family. father died in Germany recently, and his niece, who

Meanwhile Somerville and Engel both intimate that before then some facts will be given to the public which will show that instead of their being principals at the back of which the government of the United States has, through fraud, cunning and deceit, been placed. OUR PRESIDENTS' WIVES.

[From the London Daily News, March 29.] The "fierce light that beats upon a throne" seems to fall with a rather uncomfortable glare on the wives of Presidents of the United States. The widow of Presidents dent Polk might perhaps have guessed that the decease of that lamented statesman would have delivered her from deputations. The Tennessee Legislature, taking a different view of the matter, have lately called formally on Mrs. Polk, and indoed it appears that in paying this visit they only complied with a usual practice. Representative J. F. Stokes "alung" some eloquent periods at Mrs. Polk, assuring her that "we cherish you as one in whom womanip worth and rare graces find bright expression." Mrs. Lucy Webb Hayes, the wife of the new President, has also attracted a good deal of kindip notice. It appears that she was a pupi at a "Methodist Female College" when she met "Rutherford B.," her illustrious husband. "At that time she was noticeable for her long, flowing black hair, dark cyebrows, white teeth and beautiful eyes." It was a case of love at first sight. When Rutherford B. Hayes became a major general his wife "made frequent trips to the scene of carnage," She is now described as "a lady of large domestic tastes," whatever that expression may mean, and it is graftfying to know that she also possesses "sturdy old-time principle." Retiring ladies may cease to regret that in this king-ridden land they can never be the wives of Presidents. from deputations. The Tennessee Legislature, taking JOAQUIN MILLER'S EX-WIFE. [From the San Francisco Post, March 25.] Miss Minnie Myrtle has had some reputation as a writer of both prose and pootry in her time, and con-siderable notoriety as the wife of the poet Joaquin Miller. She procured a divorce from him half a dozen or more years since, and the incongruity of the pair was undoubted. They possessed very similar tempers and were each of them afflicted with wayward literary tendencies. I have wondered that Minnie Myrtle did not pursue her literary career in after years, but she seems to have dropped it. Four years ago she took the field as a lecturer, with considerable success, I thought, I had met the lady a few times and was impressed with her style and appearance. She was not pretty, but had the style of beauty that would become a tragic herome on the stage. She certainty had ability that only needed to be properly directed to be respected. I was in San Francisco when she made her debut on the lecture platform, and was one of the smail audience that strended it. She impressed the audience lavorably, and, taking her exclusional for her theme, she made some terrible exposures of his laulis and frailines, and desicated his poetry with startling effect. She marrated her early life at Cape Blanco, on the coast hear Port Orlord; the coming of Milier; her shooting an eagle from the limb of a dead fir that overshocked the sea; how she and Miller, when she took him late the surf with her canco, were wrecked and washed ashore by a big wave; how Miller saved himself with great presence of impal, and how, for all that, she looked upon him as her yellow-haired viking. Knowing her and knowing him weil, I may have heard the lecture with more than ordinary interest. She made our hearts their when she told how willer left her to toil for his children on the verge oil starvation, hungry for bread, and it seemed as if, after this thrilling rommencement, the woman could seems to have dropped it. Four years ago she took west initiately street, near Broadway, and put up a force to tool for his children on the verge of its avaion, hungry for bread, and it seemed as it, alter this thrilling commencement, the woman could continue her public career with hope of success; but suddenly she was brined by Miler to quit exposing thought she was brined by Miler to quit exposing their joint lives to the public he sought to propriate. It is lately announced that Minne Myrtie Miller has become Mrs. Lozan, and that last must be a relied to her errant husband, of old, who will leel pleased, perhaps, that she has ceased to take one mile start of W. THE BURLING SLIP HORROR.

BURIAL OF THE VICTIMS-MR. DEAN STILL UNABLE TO TESTIFY-A NEW WITNESS. The remains of the two victims of the terrible hand renade tragedy, George W. Jewett and Orville D. aught that transpired during the day the history of their peculiar death, except in so far as revealed circumstantial evidence, may be said to be still in the limbo of an uncertainty. At the Coroner's inquest, however, the present strong belief may take a fixed shape. Last evening a Herald reporter called at Mr. Dean's residence, and was informed that he was progressing as favorably as could be expected considering his injuries, but his physicians would not permit him Mr. Dean's son, who was in the office at the time of the explosion, said his belief was that his father could have nothing to add to the published accounts when in a condition to speak. He got out of the office almost the instant of the explosion, and so quickly that his face was not blackened by the cloud of soot raised by the explosion. Young Mr. Dean said he went down stairs with his father, when the father rushed from the one report, that of the exploding bomb. The pisto shots he did not hear at all. He is sure, he says, tha this explosion had not been preceded by any wordy differences between Mr. Orville D. Jewett and any one differences between Mr. Orville D. Jewett and any one else in the office, for his seat was just outside the door of the office in which were the two Jewetts and his father, and, he concludes, he could have heard any loud conversation or unusual sounds, and that there were none he is perfectly satisfied. As the case at present stands the theory of the suicide of Orville B. Jewett is the only tangible one to be founded on the known circumstances. While the writer was at Mr. Dean's house the colored man employer's health, and when he left young Mr. Dean said that the colored man had seen Orville fire a pistor at himself, and doubt-tess he would so swear at the inquest.

FUNRAL OF ONVILLE B. JEWETT.

The clegant mansion of Mr. Peter C. Cornell, No. 222 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, which commands one of the finest views of the river and harbor attainable from that city, presented a scene of sombre and mournful character yesterday afternoon. The occasion was the funeral services over the remains of his gephew, the late Orville D. Jewett. Shortly after noon the sympathizing friends and neighbors of the deceased began to assemble at the readence of Mr. Cornell, The body, which was laid in an elegant rosewood casket, lined with black citoth and trummed with velvet of the same color, heavily silver mounted, was in an excellent state of preservation. The bands were clasped across the breast and the features bore a rather palued expression, There were a few slight abrasions about the lace near the nose, which were doubtless cansed by failing breast and the features bore a rather pained expression. There were a lew slight abrasions about the lace near the nose, which were doubtless caused by falling after the latal shots had been fired. The c fill was arranged against the wall in a broad passageway that coun cis the front and rear pariors. The hid was covered with Marshal Nel roses, tube and tea roses and a profusion of smilax and evergreens. Around the plate, which bore the following inscription, was a wreath of lilies of the valley:

ORVILLE D. JEWETT,
died April 5, 1877,
aged 39 years and 3 months.

On the wall above the casket was an oil painting representing a woman upon her knees, in prayer, before a cracifix, which she held upon a table with her right hand. Beneath the table was adeath's head. At the foot of a life-sized piece of statuary at the end of the ball, near the head of the casket, rested a beautiful pillow of rare white flowers, in the centre of which were the words, "Company I, 156th Regiment." The latter was the tribute of the old comrades in arms of the deceased, who in 1862 went to the war as captain of the company hamed. Among other floral offerings were a cross of liles from Mr. Peter C. Cornell, and crosses from Mrs. George W. Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. James A. Parsons; a broken shaft of tyr from James W. Fellows and a broken shaft of tyr from James W. Fellows and a broken shaft of tyr from James W. Fellows and a broken shaft of rare white flowers from R. C. Fellows. As the visitors to the house of mourning entered they passed by the remains and were shown to seats in the parlors. Among those present were Judge Benedict, of the United States Circuit Court; S. B. Sillman, J. Sullivan Thorn, Arthur Benson, J. Burroughs, W. Hull, Brigadier General Charles Carlion, M. Morrison, members of the Millitary Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, of which latter deceased was Brevet Lieutenant Clonel. Mrs. Orville D. Jewett was unable to be present at the obsequies of her husband, being conlined to bed by reason of nervous shock which she sustained upon receipt of the sad intelligence. Mr. Charles on the transmitted of the Charles of the Arthur School of the United States of the prayer the reversed gentleman prayed that the Lord would sustain the widow and raise her from her bed of sickness and give her that hope which the world cannot give nor take away, and that He would comiort the afflicted mother and kindred, and teach them to turn to their eternal profit this great sorrow. BURIAL OF GEORGE W. JEWETT.

The remains of George W. Jewett, uncle of Orville D. Jowett, were also interred in Greenwood Cemetery gesterday. The funeral services were held the previeus day. The procession, which was composed of the hearse, twelve carriages, and about 300 employeds of the white lead manufactory, was conveyed from Staten Island on the steamer Castleton at hall-past cleven o'clock. The body was consigned to the earth in the family plot, which is situated between Vista and Deli avenues. There were no services in the grave.

POLICE INSOLENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD ;-As the behavior of the police force is just now at tracting considerable attention you may be interested in my experience. On Tuesday morning, a little before six o'clock, I reached the corner of Worth and Centre streets on my way from the Stonington boat. I accosted a policeman was stood by and asked when a car would be due. He answered my question, but accosted a policeman who stood by and asked when a car would be due. He answered my question, but his attention being attracted to my vilise demanded what I was selling at that hour. He then insisted on inspecting my value. I told him it was none of his business, and warned him against examining it He possessed himself of the value, which I opened for him thinking that he might break it. I also gave him my name and address. The value contained only articles of tolet, and there was nothing whatever suspicious in my manner or baggage. It was then after sunrise. Becoming offended, he declared his intention to return the values and limitly arrested me. I then accompanied him to the Mulberry street station. I intentionally pass over the particulars of the conduct of the policeman, as these will form the subject of investigation. I presumed at the time that he was intoxicated. At the station my value was examined and handed to me. The policeman made no personal charge wintever, affirming merely that he had setzed the bag on suspicion. The sergent made light of my complaints, informing me that I had put myself in the wrong by telling the efficer my baggage was none of his business. He resented my suspiction of intoxication against the policeman, and did not centure him nor examine into his condition or conduct. It is important to the public to know that, in the eyes of so responsible an officer, any policeman has a right to stop any citizen he pleases, examine his lingage and carry him to the station if he iskes. A sergeant seems to consider that to watch over the conduct of his men is none of his business. It travellers are aggreeved they may make charges; but the much greater offence to the force itself is entirely disregarded. This officer was good enough to inform me that I had contradicted myself, whereas the more facts in his own hands should have been the subject of inquiry on the spot. There was a prisoner brought up on no charge; an article, evidently harmless, brought mas suspicious by an officer who knew it
